

I would like to ask you to consider not preempting state Telephone Privacy laws in favor of adopting one lower national standard. Since being added to the list here in Indiana my daily phone calls have gone from at least 30 to 1 or 2. Of those 30, 25 or more of them were telemarketers. I now only receive 1 to 2 a month. I have a life again and don't feel constantly hounded by sales people. I feel it is my phone and I should be able to limit who has access to it. The strict Indiana Law is wonderful. If my phone that I pay for rings I know it will be somebody that I need or want to talk to and I will not be harassed by sales messages. I don't feel that the rights of people selling things should override my right to have peace and quite in my own home.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Mary Miles
